Re: Free Radio Asheville

Dear Sir:

Recently I learned that the FCC had visited Free Radio Asheville, a small unlicensed radio station in North Carolina. This concerns me greatly. The FCC is currently considering ways to license small stations. Why should the FCC continue to enforce rules against small stations when the agency admits that these rules needs changing? Please cease any action against Free Radio Asheville and other micropower stations until the FCC changes its rules so as to accomodate small stations.

Thank you very much.

Yours Very Sincerely,

Peter Stone
